ABOUT ME

I'm a dedicated beginner software developer making a purposeful transition from a successful career in online English teaching. Through my teaching experience, I've honed exceptional communication, problem-solving, and time-management skills, which I now aim to leverage in the tech industry. I bring a strong passion for learning, an analytical mindset, and the ability to break down complex ideas into manageable solutions—skills that are vital in both education and software development. As I continue to build my technical expertise, I'm eager to contribute to dynamic teams, tackle real-world challenges, and grow into a versatile developer who adds value through both technical proficiency and clear, collaborative communication.

This part of my work experience is irrelevant to my software development journey, but I deemed it necessary to add this since it has been a major part of my professional life for the last 4 years.
